Sing To The Dawn is a story about a young Thai girl called Dawan who wins a scholarship to study in a city school. Her father, who thinks that studying is not for girls, disapproves. Her younger brother, Kwai, who places second in the examination, also yearns to study in the city school but there is only one scholarship available. Dawan tries to convince her father that he should give her a chance to study. When she approaches anyone for help, she keeps on failing but she never gives up and fights for her right to study in the city school. In the end, she manages to convince her father. When the bus arrives, she almost changes her mind because she is going to miss singing to the dawn, but her grandmother encourages her to go. The story ends with Dawan sitting on the bus to the city with Kwai waving her goodbye.
